You can touch this

The Safety Touch is an antibacterial tool made of silicone that allows people to never have to touch unhygienic public devices such as an ATM machine, door handles or public transport bars ever again.

Why it matters

With people becoming far more aware of how diseases spread and wanting everything to be sterile, this tool might be an alternative to the usage of chemical products. To what extent will people go in order to preserve their health? And what other nifty products could we see make headway to help prevent the spread of germs?
